This year, the American Association for State and Local History's Awards Committee conferred its prestigious Award of Excellence in History on only one organization in the Lone Star State: the Texas Supreme Court Historical Society. The Society received the news from AASLH representative Aja Bain in late May:

On behalf of the American Association for State and Local History (AASLH), I am delighted to inform you that the publication Journal of the Texas Supreme Court Historical Society was selected as a 2019 Award of Excellence winner by the Leadership in History awards committee. The AASLH Leadership in History Awards is the nation’s most prestigious competition for recognition of achievement in state and local history. We congratulate you for the work that has brought this honor.

The award specifically honors the Summer 2018 issue of the Journal, which examined the history of African American judges, justices, and magistrates from 1642 to the present, from Maryland to Texas. AASLH will present the award during its annual meeting in Philadelphia on August 30, 2019. Three Society representatives will attend the conference and accept the award on the Society’s behalf: Executive Director Sharon Sandle, Journal Executive Editor David Furlow, and Journal Managing Editor Marilyn Duncan.

AASLH's Award of Excellence recognizes outstanding history programs, projects, and people when compared with similar activities nationwide. “Each year the awards program bestows this honor on organizations and individuals who model best practices and innovative work in our field,” said Nicholas Hoffman, AASLH National Awards Chair and Managing Director of Education and Visitor Experience at the Missouri Historical Society. “These fifty award winners show the importance of using history to address contemporary issues and working with communities to share history that is relevant to them.”

Thanks to the Society’s 2017-18 President, Justice Dale Wainwright. During his term as President, Justice Wainwright made this AASLH award possible by inspiring our Journal team to dedicate a special issue to the history of African American judges. His final President’s Message appears in that issue.

Thanks to Executive Director Sharon Sandle and 2018-19 President Marcy Greer. Sharon Sandle and Marcy Greer supported the Society’s nomination at every step of the process. In addition, Sharon’s column “Recognizing the Paths and Accomplishments of Texas’s African American Judges” set the tone for every article and feature that followed in the special Journal issue.

Thanks to our Summer 2018 Journal Authors:

- The Hon. Wallace Jefferson, former Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice, shared important life lessons gleaned from the example his father set for him, in “The Constitution Imparts Responsibilities as Well as Rights.”

- Prairie View A&M author/scholar Michael Hurd provided a professional Texas historian’s story of one judge’s unprecedented accomplishments in “Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Judge Morris Overstreet,” spotlighting the first African American elected to a statewide Texas office.

- Attorney/historian John Browning contributed the most recent of his series of excellent historical articles with his biography-in-progress “Chief Justice Carolyn Wright: A Profile in Excellence.”

- The Hon. Murry Cohen, First Court of Appeals Justice, and Virgie Mouton, Assistant Dean of the Thurgood Marshall School of Law in Houston, prepared complementary judicial biographies of the same lion of the law—Justice Henry E. Doyle, the first African American Justice of a Texas Court of Appeals. Their personal recollections of Justice Doyle, along with the photos and other images they provided, offered new perspectives on one of Texas’s most important appellate judges.

- The Hon. Andrew Edison, U.S. Magistrate Judge for the Southern District of Texas in Galveston, authored a discerning portrait of Senior U.S. District Court Judge Kenneth M. Hoyt, the first African American man to serve as a federal judge in Texas.
• Attorney, author, and American Bar Association leader Melanie Bragg shed new light on the Hon. Gabrielle Kirk McDonald, the first African-American appointed to serve on a federal Texas court and the third African American appointed in the United States. We’re also grateful to Judge McDonald for participating in Melanie’s in-depth interview regarding her early years and her international service presiding over the first International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia.

• The Hon. Evelyn McKee, retired Austin Municipal Court Presiding Judge and acclaimed author, penned an essay, “The Lady on the Bus Stop,” that told the inspiring story of a single incident that led her to attend law school and become a judge.

• The life story of the Hon. Harriet M. Murphy, the first permanently appointed African American woman judge in Texas, was an important addition to the award-winning Journal issue. We thank the University of Texas at Austin’s Division of Diversity and Community Engagement for allowing us to reprint the story from their book, As We Saw It: The Story of Integration at the University of Texas at Austin. Marilyn Duncan compiled and illustrated the article and added a piece about Judge Murphy’s memoir, There All the Honor Lies.

• Stephen Pate, an attorney and historian who has contributed many fine articles to this Journal, provided an in-depth analysis of Reconstruction's impact on the Texas federal judiciary when African Americans first began thinking of becoming judges and justices in Texas.

• Maryland historian Dr. Henry M. Miller and his colleagues the archaeologists and historians of Historic St. Mary’s City, Maryland, first made David Furlow aware of Mathias de Sousa's story as America's first African American magistrate, a man elected in 1642. David's Executive Editor Column placed de Sousa’s story in the wider context of African American contributions to judicial history.

• Bill Kroger wrote a call to action for the Summer issue: “The Time to Preserve Texas’s Slave Case Records is Now.” It has led to fruitful discussions about judicial records preservation by the members of the Texas State Historical Association’s Archives Committee.

• Journal Deputy Executive Editor Dylan Drummond, then President-elect and now President of the Society, contributed a scholarly article documenting how Sam Houston’s victory at the April 21, 1836 Battle of San Jacinto filled the ranks of the Republic of Texas's judiciary with men of courage, competence, and character.

Thanks to the four outstanding individuals who supported the Journal’s nomination with strong letters of recommendation:

• The Hon. Carl E. Stewart, Chief Judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, wrote that the “Journal’s thoughtful, detailed work shed light on the narratives of those African-American stalwarts in the Texas judiciary whose lives may have not been widely chronicled in other historical writings.”

“Historical contributions such as the Society’s Summer 2018 Journal issue are important avenues for telling these previously untold or rarely told stories,” Chief Judge Stewart noted. “States across the nation should endeavor to research the ‘hidden stories’ in their own communities, using the Texas Supreme Court Historical Society Journal’s Summer issue as an exemplary model of how to accomplish that. It is important to bring awareness to the stories of those hidden figures in communities around the nation. Their stories are a part of the fabric of our society.”

- Harris County Law Library Director Mariann Sears wrote in her letter of recommendation that “The Summer 2018 issue of the Journal has profoundly influenced the Law Library by weaving together the inspiring stories of Texas African American jurists and attorneys, both past and present. As a consequence of the information contained in the articles of this issue, the Law Library has begun gathering materials from its collection and the Harris County Archives to create a physical exhibit and a digital exhibit that will highlight the contributions of Justice Doyle, Robert Hainsworth, and other founding members of the Houston Lawyers Association.”

She added that the exhibits would launch in May 2019, near the 65th anniversary of the issuance of Brown v. Board of Education. “Because it has inspired action on the part of the Law Library to make the history of African American jurists in Texas more accessible to all of its patrons, the Summer 2018 issue of the Texas Supreme Court Historical Society Journal is deserving of the AASLH’s Award of Excellence. Inspiration to action seems to me to be the very definition of excellence.”

- Randolph B. “Mike” Campbell, Regents Professor of History at the University of North Texas and author of Gone to Texas: A History of the Lone Star State, recommended the Summer 2018 issue of the Journal for the award “because it tells a story that heretofore largely has not appeared in print. A great deal of the history of what judges have handed down in applying the law to African Americans has been described at great length,” he wrote, “but the stories of African Americans themselves as jurists are largely unknown. This history is relatively brief because Texas remained a bastion of segregation until the second half of the twentieth century, but that makes the stories of pioneer African American judges at all levels all the more significant.”

Professor Campbell added that “the Journal also offers invaluable primary source material on the experiences of African Americans as they traveled the road to joining the Texas Judiciary.”
Such first-person accounts of major milestones in their careers, he noted, are “an invaluable source” for historians.

- Historian Gary M. Lavergne, author of Before Brown: Heman Marion Sweatt, Thurgood Marshall, and the Long Road to Justice and other books, wrote that “The summer 2018 issue is a splendid blend of uncompromising scholarship providing innovative approaches to the interpretation, contextualization, corroboration, and sourcing of evidence, and the consideration of a deeply personal need we all have to actually enjoy what it is we are reading.” He added that the issue “is a splendid example of what scholarly and historical journals are supposed to be—historical works exploring sources and stories that, if included in a book, would likely make any single volume pedantic.”

Lavergne observed that through its “consistent excellence in the field of state and local history, ... the Journal of the Texas Supreme Court Historical Society reminds us of the fact that the object of writing is reading.”

These four letters of recommendation were key parts of the Society’s nomination packet, providing the critical assessments of impact required by the AASLH Awards Committee.

A final word of thanks:

The TSCHS Journal was established in Fall 2011 through the initiative of 2011-12 Society President Lynne Liberato, who envisioned that the Journal would take root and grow into a premier legal history publication over time. This award is clear evidence that that time has come. Thank you for the vision and ongoing support, Lynne.
